

Dear quilter,

It's that time of year.... Things get cut in the night. And then they get sewn. So... strum the strings and beat the drum- here we go with a Halloween tune!

Graying hair and ruby lips,
Fabric flies from her fingertips
Echoed whirrings in the night
She's a crafty spirit on an endless flight

Woo-hoo, quilty woman
See how fast she cuts
Woo-hoo, quilty woman
She's got the gleam in her eye

She's held spellbound in the night
Freshened needles and bright light
Crazy laughter in her craft room
As she drives herself to madness with a new pattern

Woo-hoo, quilty woman
See how fast she sews
Woo-hoo, quilty woman
She's got a lint in her eye

Well I know you are just like her
Let me tell you Quilter
She's been shoppin' at the quilt shows
And there's a rumor going round-More fabric has been found
She can quilt it in the nighttime- When the hub's in bed

Woo-hoo, quilty woman
She how fast she quilts
Woo-hoo, quilty woman
She got the binding down tight!

Happy Halloween!

Updated 10/2017

As the holiday season is fast approaching us, I know many people are looking at ways to give back. As many of you know, my son Adam has spent the last year in a battle with Wilms tumor cancer. He is in remission now and will be turning two in November.

The last Christmas season, my family was living at the Ronald McDonald house in Memphis while Adam received chemo treatments at St. Jude's hospital. This December, our family has to make at least two trips down to Saint Jude's for routine scans to make sure Adam is still in remission.

I am hoping that members would be willing to make/write up 3-5 Christmas cards each that I can hand deliver to the families in residence to remind them that people everywhere are hoping for the best outcome and to help them not feel alone during the holidays. You don't have to include anything, although I plan on including a sticker sheet in mine because all kids love stickers!

There are 53 patient families who live at the Ronald McDonald house and many more who live in the area or visit for scans (like my family). I can pick them up at any of the upcoming guild meetings if you'd like to be included.

Thank you,
Marla Moore
